• To Gain some Skill in Evaluating Three Person Relationships

• Comfortable private room, big enough to divide everybody into small groups of three and four, ideally around a small table.
• Assessment material, including pencils or pens (See end of Lesson 2)
• Tricolor Talking Sticks
- Blindfolds for everybody

Procedures:

Divide the group into teams of four. Avoid repeating having people in same group as Lesson one. Assign initial roles: Storyteller, Yellow, Red and Blue. Ask everyone to have blindfolds ready.

Listening Exercise #1

This is basically a listening and evaluating exercise. One person tells a tale of a problematic triadic relationship raised by the evaluation questionnaire. The remaining three members (blindfolded to increase their attentiveness) listen in the different skill sets. Yellow listens for feelings, Red listens to try to identify the problems in the relationship, referring, if possible, to the seven problems presented in chapter two. Blue listens for overall patterns in the situation. Once the person has told his tale, the listeners take off their blindfolds and reports back to the speaker what they have heard. The speaker listens to each one without arguing or retelling. The order for feedback moves from yellow to red to blue. Do not use advocacy protocols. Emphasis is on listening.

Six minutes to tell the tale. Three minutes for feedback from each role.

15 minutes
Everybody shifts roles. Storyteller becomes yellow, yellow becomes red, red becomes blue and blue becomes the story-teller. Listeners put on blindfolds. Storyteller tells her tale and listeners take off their blindfolds and feedback in turn.

Rotate roles again and perform the exercise.
